

See the Music

(Music is what Color sounds like!)

A lighthearted investigation into the similarities between music and art, comparing common design elements ... and a look at how some people actually can “see the music”!

Do you think some people can actually “hear” a color? In fact, your members are quite familiar with some famous actors, artists and musicians who share this interesting sensory condition. It turns out though that there are many similarities between the design elements of art and music, and we can use them to “see the music” ourselves!

See the Music is an engaging, hour-long, interactive presentation that culminates in the audience participating in the creation of an original piece of music!

We discuss how the human brain interprets data, pattern recognition, art theory and a bit of history. We look at some famous (and not so famous) paintings and the ways that music uses some of the same terms and ideas as art. Together we choose a rhythm, line, color and form for our original musical piece.

At a “See the Music” experience, your members will learn something new, enjoy an engaging activity with their peers and perhaps, rekindle an interest in creating their own art or music!

Paul Elwood is a teacher, artist and working musician, residing in Lebanon NJ. He is delighted to be able to share his love of art and music with audiences of all kinds, especially with seniors.
